HOME OWNERS AIDED BY LOANS

U. S. Plan Removes Danger of
Foreclosure on 23,259
Properties.

In a statement urging mortgage holders of Ohio to cooperate with the Home Owners' Loan corporation, Robert M. Schagen, counsel for the corporation, has disclosed that the danger of foreclosure has been removed from 23,259 homes in this state by the obtaining of mortgages from that number of mortgage holders to exchange their mortgages for corporation bonds. A copy of the statement recently was received by H. P. Drake, agent for the corporation in Marion, Warren and Crawford counties.

To make the operations of the corporation, successful mortgage holders must agree to accept the corporation's four-percent bonds as payment of the mortgages. Mr. Schagen said.

In the first 100 days of the corporation's operation, 100,000 mortgages had been taken over by the corporation. Mr. Schagen said. He said that the corporation has been successful in obtaining the exchange of mortgages for bonds in many cases where the mortgage holder was unable to make the payments on the mortgage.

Mr. Drake pointed to Mr. Schagen's statement to the work already done in Ohio by the corporation. Mr. Schagen said, in part:

"With the danger of foreclosure removed from 23,259 Ohio homes, the danger to Ohio home owners of wholesale foreclosures is gone, and I believe the Home Owners' Loan corporation has already, in the short space of eight weeks met one of the emergencies which it was designed to meet, namely the threat of foreclosure to our distressed home owners."

"The value in dollars of the 23,259 mortgages mentioned above is $79,243,992. These are now frozen assets in the hands of the mortgagees, upon which little interest is being collected, and upon which generally, the properties are paying no taxes. When these mortgages have been refinanced by the Home Owners' Loan corporation, the mortgagees will be possessed of a live asset in the shape of a tax exempt bond with 4 per cent interest."

Daily Guide to Health

BY DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND.

Facts About "Spotted Fever."

Spotted fever is a disease of the skin and on the lining of the mouth. The sufferer is extremely restless, and unable to sleep. A skin eruption appears about the third day after the onset of the fever. The skin becomes mottled, giving the patient a "spotted" look. The rash first appears on the wrist, ankles and back and soon covers the entire surface of the body. Though most of the cases are of mild nature, severe epidemics of Rocky Mountain fever, sometimes fatal, have been known about it. Our present knowledge concerning this disease, as well as the preventive measures, are only of recent date. As yet, no specific cure has been discovered for this baffling disease. There is reason to hope that the research bureau of the public health service will soon discover a cure for this strange ailment.

Recently a vaccine has been developed and it is expected it will be of great benefit in the control and prevention of future serious epidemics. It is given to all individuals exposed to this disease. Already it has been successfully used as a preventive measure against this unpleasant ailment. (Copyright, 1933, R. P. S., Inc.)

"Ned" Salisbury Moves Up.

To many of those persons who have lived in Marion for a quarter of a century or more, this week's news stories included one of exceptional interest.

It referred to Dr. Edward L. Salisbury, a Marion boy who has achieved unusual distinction in the great field of surgery and medicine.

To many of those who had known him as a boy, the news of his outstanding success came virtually as a sudden revelation. Most of them were aware that he had won substantial recognition in his profession, but not until reports of his participation in the program of the American College of Surgeons at Chicago appeared in the public print this week did they realize the extent of his advancement.

Thus it may be said that to these Marion friends of Dr. Salisbury, he was suddenly transformed from an ordinarily successful professional man to one of extraordinary note. In fact, to some who had not seen him since he was "Ned" Salisbury, one of juvenile population of what was then known as Marion's "West End," the transformation was even more marked and pronounced. Young "Ned" Salisbury they saw photographed this week with Dr. C. E. Cleveland, Dr. Whitehouse of England, and two other distinguished men of their profession, all designated in the news report as "five famous surgeons."

Usually the development from boyhood on through the years of man's career is such a gradual process that those who witness it from day to day are not impressed with the record of achievement and advancement. The full effect of the story is lost because the opening scenes are dimmed by the lengthening and slowly changing details of passing years.

Here, however, was a career in which the intervening span of years was bridged for Marion spectators, and the result is one peculiarly pleasing and inspiring. It brings into bold relief the possibilities open to every American boy of ability, character and ambition.

Reynard's Return.

All Marion offers its best wishes and hopes for success to Ed Sharpless as he returns to the stage in an effort to win back at least a measure of his one-time distinction and popularity as a public entertainer. This cordial feeling will be shared by thousands of followers of the theater elsewhere, from the ranks of performers as well as the public, when they hear of his ambition to put across a successful comeback.

For there are thousands in all sections of the country who will remember Sharpless as "Reynard," who played in the largest theaters in the largest cities over a long period of years, and established himself as the outstanding entertainer in the art of ventriloquism. It was not solely as a ventriloquist, however, that he achieved note. He could hardly have reached the heights on that basis alone. There are numerous ventriloquists, some of them possibly as good at "throwing their voices" as Reynard was in his best days. But none was gifted with the skill in showmanship that enabled this product of Marion to ascend to the pinnacle of his profession.

Marion's NRA Board.

Excellent selections have been made in appointment of the NRA compliance board for Marion. In each division there has been named a citizen thoroughly qualified to represent not only the special interests with which he is connected, but also the city as a whole. All who are familiar with the qualities of the men named as members of the board will agree that wise and fair consideration of all matters relating to NRA enforcement here is assured as far as the functions of the local group are concerned. It is indeed an important public service that this group is called upon to perform. Its members are entitled to and should have the fullest cooperation and support of all citizens. Their job is more than merely looking after Marion's interests in connection with the NRA. Their mission has a direct bearing on the nation's welfare.

Our Political System.

The well-known fact that the political system of the United States is a complex one, and that it is a system of checks and balances, is a fact that is well known to all who are familiar with the system. The system is a system of checks and balances, and it is a system of checks and balances that is well known to all who are familiar with the system.

The receiver already mentioned in the text of some citizens who are familiar with the system, is a fact that is well known to all who are familiar with the system. The system is a system of checks and balances, and it is a system of checks and balances that is well known to all who are familiar with the system.

There is no tendency in the system to take charge of the system, and it is a fact that is well known to all who are familiar with the system. The system is a system of checks and balances, and it is a system of checks and balances that is well known to all who are familiar with the system.

The point is that throwing out a man who has been performing his duties creditably and replacing him with another at a most important stage of a business undertaking as vital as this is in the affairs of the community can hardly be measured as sound policy. Certainly the directors of a private enterprise would follow such a course.

But in our governmental and political system, which is not perfect and never will be, a public servant cannot count upon uninterrupted tenure of office, no matter how meritorious his performance of duty may be. For this, politicians are not alone responsible. We, the people, often disregard merit by abruptly tossing out able officials before they have had opportunity to complete an important work.

We derive a lot of fun and thrills from the uncertainty and excitement of our political game, but sometimes the cost is excessive.

Uncle Sam's Loans.

It may have occurred to some people of skeptical and curious turn of mind that the federal government, in becoming a heavily involved creditor to the people, assumes a willingness to repay whose existence cannot be proved.

No dependable estimate of the amount of money which will have been loaned to the public directly and indirectly by the federal government eventually is available. For the purpose of stating the probable circumstances of the future, none is needed. A vast sum will be involved by the time lending possibilities have been exhausted.

For instance, it is reported as a sign of successful operation in the farm credit administration that credit is going out to agriculturists at the rate of a million dollars a day. Similar success is sought by the corporation established to make home loans. Other millions are being passed out, or will be, to states and municipalities.

If the money were to be repaid in full with interest, it would mean that the federal government is assuming itself of a steady source of future income by taking advantage of the circumstances of the present. Instead of feeling sorry for their children, taxpayers of this generation could look forward to repayments of principal and interest with something like the smug satisfaction of people who have made sound investments.

But who imagines that when the proper time comes and the great depression has been partially forgotten that politicians will stand before the people and demand repayment? It is not in the box of experience with representative democracy. As surely as vote-getters make secure their jobs by trying to give the people what they think the people want there will be a demand—and a successful one—for release from the people's burden of indebtedness to their government.

A Public Lottery.

The proposal has been advanced, in all seriousness, that the United States let down its ban on lotteries and conduct a gigantic drawing for the relief of the poor. France has just sold tickets in a scheme of this kind. Let's look at it.

Banks and postoffices were agents for the sale of 2,000,000 tickets at $5.05 each on the present rate of exchange, bringing in a total of $12,100,000. One lucky person will win $20,000,000. Fifteen others will win $500,000 each for a total of $7,500,000. Every tenth ticket holder will get his money back plus 100 per cent interest, a total of $24,000,000. Thus $3,600,000 will be paid out leaving about $8,500,000 for which the buyers of tickets receive no return.

This money comes largely from persons who cannot afford to lose it but who save and sacrifice to get the money on the chance that fortune will strike them. There are better ways of raising public funds even in these perplexing times, than by taking the money from those families to whom this fling at random fortune means the sacrifice of necessities.

METEORITE AS MEMORIAL. The Franklin County Pioneer society executives, searching in the country about Columbus for a boulder of suitable size, shape and color to be used to support the tablet that marks the place of the cabin of John Brinkley, who was the first white resident on the site of Columbus, were singularly fortunate. They found such a boulder on the property of the Upper Arlington company near the grounds of the Scioto Country club and King Thompson, president of the company, not only gave permission to the society to remove the stone, but his company helped do the work. When the boulder was turned for examination it was found that it was not a boulder at all, but a meteorite. The society was organized in June, 1906.

Behind The News In Washington And Wall Street

BY GEORGE DUNNO

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14.—Washington observers begin to wonder whether the possibility of the currency J. P. Morgan is running for new and higher office.

He has been out here apparently at his own expense—Kenneth Hayes, San Francisco, financial writer, to act as the personal publicity representative.

And the other day he held a press conference. Even the oldest treasury reporter couldn't remember a comptroller who had done that.

O'Connor's chief job at the moment is the thawing out of frozen banks so people can get their money. Grumbles are heard that the Californian hasn't functioned fast enough.

In fact the comptroller brought that matter up himself, reading aggressively from an editorial attack on his office.

He said that after all the plans he has approved for reopening frozen banks go through only 12 per cent of the present volume of frozen deposits would remain in an icy state.

But he could not predict when that would be.

Brass Tacks. O'Connor distributed a prepared statement showing that 462 per cent of all the national banks which remained closed after the March bank holiday are now either licensed, chartered or liquidated. Of the remainder 80 per cent had received approval of reorganization plans.

Digging into the statement it develops that, as of Sept. 30, there were 778 national banks with their doors still closed on some $671,000,000 of deposits.

The comptroller's report of progress didn't satisfy all of the financial writers present. Several of them heckled O'Connor with a cross-fire of questions.

Finally one sharpshooter said rather pointedly he thought the approach to reopening the banks had been a pretty slow process.

"Well," said O'Connor, "I wish you were in this chair."

"So do I," rejoined the writer, who probably has money in one of the District's still-battered banks.

Arthur Brisbane's News Review

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—United States will have "Devil's Island" of its own more secure than the "Devil's Island" whence escape often.

The department of justice supply "devils" for the shape of bad men, bakers, kidnappers and characters that make life miserable.

The new "Devil's Island" is a military prison on Alcatraz, 12 acres of island space are on a high rock with cutting wind swirling all around. No one has ever escaped. Attorney General Cummings says kidnappers and others sentenced for life will stay in prison when they enter of the 600 very safe cells on Alcatraz.

A mob of several thousands, turning around headquarters of NRA in New York reminded the police that unpleasant happenings are always possible.

In a short time the police, turning in a riot call, had gathered in 50 persons. Crowds, said the police to be made up of a group of radicals, had come to demand that NRA guarantee a "living wage."
